Unbreakable Bonds: How Calgary Humane Society is Encouraging the Human-Animal Connection

The bond between humans and their companion animals is nothing short of magical. It's a symbiotic relationship where both parties find their needs met—pets rely on humans for food, shelter, water, and protection, while people often depend on their furry friends for a sense of purpose and companionship. This profound connection is known as the human-animal bond.

However, this bond faces numerous threats: domestic violence, displacement due to natural disasters, and even the ever-looming specter of inflation. The risk of severing this bond can lead to devastating consequences for both humans and animals: isolation, loneliness, depression, and, in some cases, even loss of life.

Recognizing the gravity of this bond, Calgary Humane Society is dedicated to preserving it through our Continued Companionship programming. This initiative encompasses various programs, including the Pet Food Bank, Emergency Boarding and Pet Safekeeping, No-Cost Spay/Neuter and Wellness Clinics, Rosco's Keep Them Home, Pets and Renters, and the Seniors Program. Each program addresses unique needs but shares one singular goal: to protect the human-animal bond by connecting pet owners with essential resources.

Through these programs, we have touched many lives, each with its own unique story. We have encountered individuals bravely escaping domestic violence, battling health crises, and stretching their last dollar to ensure their pets are fed and cared for. The common thread among these diverse circumstances is the unwavering determination to protect and care for their beloved pets.

The reality is, without resources to maintain responsible pet ownership, people face extreme risks. We have met individuals who were previously suicidal before they met their pet, who then gave them purpose to stay alive. We have met individuals who got, and stayed, sober because of their pet. These stories highlight the vital importance of the Continued Companionship initiatives.

For many pet owners, the thought of surrendering their pet is a living nightmare. No one should have to face the heartbreak of giving up their pet because they have no choice. For one Calgary senior, this situation became a gut-wrenching reality.

Charlotte had her cat, Hershey, for eleven years. She rescued him from a drug house when he was just a kitten. Ten years later, Charlotte faced a life-altering challenge—she was fleeing from domestic violence. Seeking shelter and safety for both of them, Charlotte enrolled Hershey in our Pet Safekeeping program. After a harrowing separation, they were reunited weeks later and Charlotte was so grateful that she became a volunteer to pay it forward.

Just one year later, a new crisis struck. Hershey fell ill, becoming lethargic and vomiting. Charlotte, now a senior on a low income, was unable to afford the necessary medical attention. She searched desperately for low-cost veterinary care but found no available resources in her time of need. With nowhere left to turn, she approached us, quietly inquiring about any possible resources. She braced herself for what seemed inevitable—surrendering her closest companion to get him the care he needed.

However, in 2023, we launched the Seniors Program. This initiative was designed with seniors like Charlotte in mind, acknowledging the struggles they face in accessing proper care for their pets. With the rising costs of veterinary services, many seniors on fixed incomes cannot afford the care their pets need, risking surrender or neglect. The Seniors Program aims to keep pets with their senior owners by subsidizing veterinary costs for qualifying seniors.

So, on November 21st, 2023, when Charlotte sought help from us, believing surrender was her only option, she was instead connected to the Seniors Program. Through this program, we provided the essential resources to keep Charlotte and Hershey together—healthy, happy, and safe once again.

In every program and every story, we reaffirm our commitment to preserving the human-animal bond, ensuring that no one must face the heartbreak of losing their beloved pet. Through initiatives like the Pet Food Bank, Emergency Boarding and Pet Safekeeping, No-Cost Spay/Neuter and Wellness Clinics, Rosco's Keep Them Home, Pets and Renters, and the Seniors Program, we address critical needs and offer lifelines to those in dire situations. Each program is a testament to our dedication, providing support and resources to pet owners in their most vulnerable moments. Whether it's helping a senior keep their cherished companion, offering refuge to pets of domestic violence survivors, or aiding those facing financial hardship, Calgary Humane Society stands as a beacon of hope. Our unwavering mission is clear: to protect animals, support people, and create a more humane world by keeping pets and their owners together, healthy, happy, and safe, reaffirming the profound connection that enriches both human and animal lives.

Pet Safekeeping Program

121 animals were supported while their families fled an unsafe domestic situation. This is a 20% increase from the prior year.

Emergency Boarding

42 animals were housed temporarily at Calgary Humane Society while their families managed an urgent and unexpected emergency.

Rosco's Keep Them Home

7 animals benefited from the Keep Them Home Program which is offered through an ongoing collaboration between Calgary Humane Society and the veterinary community of Calgary.

Phoenix Fund

15 animals used the Phoenix Fund and were provided veterinary care for an emergency. This care was offered through a partnership with our community clinics.

Food Bank

299 Food Bank hampers were distributed to those who needed support with basic animal supplies such as food and litter. This is a 57% increase from the prior year.

Seniors Program

152 animals participated in this program. This program, thanks to the generous support of the Calgary Foundation, provides support and resources to seniors who are struggling to manage the ongoing care of their pet. Everything from pet supplies to veterinary care is offered to ensure an animal can remain with their Senior family member for as long as possible.

Community Spay & Neuter Clinics

110+ applications for this new program, a no-cost spay and neuter service for low-income pet owners. Clinics are ongoing and a valuable resource to the community.

Trudy's Lifelong Love for Animals: A Heartwarming Journey

Trudy's story is one of compassion, commitment, and a deep-rooted love for animals. Growing up in Singapore during the late 60's, she learned valuable lessons about responsibility and empathy from her parents. Her mom, an active supporter of the local SPCA, instilled in Trudy and her siblings a sense of duty toward caring for animals. One remarkable memory stands out: Trudy's mom rescued seven dogs—one for each child—allowing them to name and care for their furry companions. Those early walks along Changi Beach taught Trudy the value of hard work and the joy of selflessness.

Trudy's father shared her passion for animals and was a hardworking entrepreneur. When their family faced housing challenges due to their pets, he took matters into his own hands. He purchased dog-friendly condo buildings, not only ensuring a home for his family but also creating a haven for other animal lovers. This commitment to giving back became second nature for Trudy and her siblings, shaping their family culture.

Trudy's journey continued when she moved to Calgary. Missing the companionship of a dog, she adopted a cat instead—a decision that ignited her love for feline friends. In 2021, she visited Calgary Humane Society (CHS) for a cat adoption appointment. The small, bustling organization left a lasting impression on her. Despite limited space and facilities, CHS was dedicated to caring for animals in need. Inspired by their mission, Trudy committed to supporting their growth.

Although allergies prevented her from volunteering directly, Trudy found another way to make a difference: through donations. Over the past 23 years, she has consistently supported Calgary

Humane Society. She advocates for the cause, hosts fellow animal lovers at the annual "Cocktails for Critters" event, and sponsors events through her business. Whenever emergencies arise, Trudy responds without hesitation.

One of her most cherished moments was contributing to the Capital Campaign Mural Project, something many Calgarians were also involved in. Alongside hundreds of other supporters, Trudy immortalized her beloved pets on the lobby wall—a testament to her unwavering dedication.

Trudy's generosity, commitment, and advocacy have saved countless animal lives and transformed Calgary's animal welfare landscape. Her example inspires us all to look beyond ourselves and care for our vulnerable companions. As we prepare for the 2024 Cocktails for Critters gala, we celebrate Trudy, her friends, and all the compassionate supporters, like Trudy, who make our work possible.

Thank you—you are the heart of our community, and we couldn't do this without you.

Koda's Triumph Over Fear

Fearfully shivering in the back of a backyard breeder's car, on her way to an animal shelter, Koda was determined to never trust humans again. She was roughly dragged into the shelter and although the humans of the shelter rushed out to meet her and help her, to her mind, these creatures were all one and the same; all just as capable of hurting her as the last humans she met. Koda had no interest in making new friends with humans ever again.

The shelter itself was stressful, and Koda's behaviour continued to decline as did her faith in humans.

Despite this, Animal Care, Animal Health, and Foster Care teams at Calgary Humane Society all continued to work their hardest to find a solution for Koda. We knew her past had been difficult and we were determined to find her a more hopeful future. To reduce her stress we found her a foster home willing to work with her, and take her out of the stressful shelter.

Nicole Pretty stepped up to this challenge and took Koda into her home. This would give Koda a break from the shelter and hopefully give her some space to come out of her shell, there was just one small problem...

Koda wanted nothing to do with her new foster Mom.

Nicole gave Koda ample space, hoping Koda might come around soon, as Nicole needed to inspect her fur for fleas and potentially bathe her if her suspicions about fleas were correct. But Koda continued to run back to her kennel if Nicole so much as moved around her. If not hiding in her kennel, Koda chose corners of the house to put distance between herself and humans. Despite this, Nicole named Koda for the Dakota word meaning "friend or little bear", Nicole was positive that one day this name would suit the fearful little puppy.

Luckily Nicole's cat, Magnus, struck up a friendship with Koda and showed her around the house. With Magnus by her side Koda was not completely alone and slowly began to realize she can trust Magnus's human as well. Magnus always had a talent for making friends, and Koda was helpless against his feline charms.

It wasn't long until Koda was moving closer and closer to Nicole. Finally, one day after Koda approached Nicole and she asked, "what's up sweetheart?" Koda flopped over, loose and comfortable, inviting belly rubs and affection from her foster Mom.

Nicole was beginning to see more and more glimpses into Koda's bright future.

As Koda was working on learning to accept love, she remained available for adoption on Calgary Humane Society's website. For over 300 days Koda and Nicole waited patiently to find the perfect family. Koda attended adoption appointments, but it was no easy feat finding her a good fit. She trusted Nicole, but other humans would have to work hard to earn that same trust.

Koda was considered a "patient paw", a status recognizing her long length of stay at the shelter that offered potential adopters reduced adoption fees and the opportunity to take an animal for a sleepover. One interested adopter brought Koda home for multiple sleepovers, and with the help of Koda's foster Mom she tentatively became comfortable around this person and his dog. Hopes were high! This could be Koda's chance!

Unfortunately the sleepovers proved to be more stressful to Koda than anything, she preferred the typical routine of her foster family and these changes to her daily agenda were scary. Despite all efforts the adopter chose to pass, and Koda remained up for adoption.

Nicole continued to work with Koda. Determined to find Koda a great family, Nicole did not let this turn of events deter her. Koda enjoyed the respite from the sleepovers but little did she know she would soon be seeing that adopter again.

In late April Koda's potential adopter reached out. He had changed his mind and with the support of Nicole and the adoptions team at Calgary Humane Society Koda began her new life with this person.

It took a year to not only find a home for little Koda, but to rehabilitate her. CHS was committed to not only getting Koda adopted into a loving family, but also to building new trust between Koda and humans and ensuring that her future would be a beautiful and bright one in her new home. With the help of Nicole's tireless efforts, combined with the support of the Adoption and Foster teams at CHS and a couple of patient paw sleepovers, Koda is living up to her namesake and is now someone's greatest friend, their cherished little bear.

Slippy's Journey: From Calgary Tank to Tropical Sanctuary

Slippy the Map Turtle had spent his life in a cozy tank in Calgary, unaware that he was an illegal species in Alberta. He was surrendered to Calgary Humane Society in September of 2023 after his owners lifestyle changed and they could no longer care for him. The staff, faced with the challenge of finding Slippy a new home, discovered that live releases were only possible if Slippy was transferred to British Columbia.

After many months of brainstorming, a connection at the Victoria Butterfly Gardens offered a perfect sanctuary. The lush, tropical environment of the butterfly conservatory on Vancouver Island seemed like a paradise for Slippy. Arrangements were made, and soon, Slippy was booked on a flight to his new home.

The day of his departure was filled with mixed emotions. Calgary Humane Society staff, who had grown fond of the little turtle, placed him in a specially designed travel carrier. As Slippy embarked on his journey, there was a collective hope for his bright future.

In May of 2024, the Victoria Butterfly Gardens welcomed Slippy with open arms. He was introduced to a vibrant, green habitat, filled with the fluttering butterflies and serene ponds. Slippy, now loved by Victoria Butterfly Gardens staff and surrounded by beauty, slowly adjusted to his new life. In this idyllic setting, he is thriving, living out his days in peace and harmony amidst the enchanting butterfly conservatory.

It is stories like Slippy's that remind all of us how important collaboration is.

Three-Legged Jingle's Journey to Her Forever Home

Jingle is a three-legged pup with the bounce of any other dog; Adoption Counsellors even mentioned that it seemed as though someone forgot to let her know she only has three legs! When she came to us, she was not keen on staying in the shelter. She was ready to find her forever home and excited to make new friends. She was frustrated, jumpy, and full of energy that even extra walks and love and cuddles from shelter humans could not mitigate. She had a lot of visitors, but not everyone was ready to take on her feisty personality. Until one day, she met her forever home with Sydney Rose.

Sydney came into the shelter to visit our dogs. She hadn't planned on adopting that day until she saw our three-legged friend, Jingle. Sydney and Jingle had an instant bond.

When Sydney took Jingle home, they both had some challenges. Despite being out of the shelter and into a new home, Jingle was still mouthy and developed separation anxiety. As a result, Sydney had a lot on her plate. Sydney reached out to Calgary Humane Society with her concerns and took one of our Polite Pooches classes.

In the class, Jingle learned everything from sitting to loose-leash walking. Jingle also learned how to deal with jumping and mouthiness which were some of Jingle's many unique quirks. Sydney and Jingle's trainer noticed that Jingle's jumping and mouthiness is something to work on in addition to some separation anxiety and uneasiness with getting in the car. Our trainer reached out to Sydney to give her some extra help at no extra cost.

After a one-on-one consult Sydney was equipped with several positive reinforcement training techniques to help her tackle Jingle's excitement and anxiety. Jingle is doing better now according to her dog mom, and they are continuing to work on Jingle's training together.

At Calgary Humane Society, we offer a variety of classes for the first-time dog owner or any dog owner looking to develop a more meaningful bond with their furry friend!

Training Classes

Puppy Club

Join our revamped Puppy Club for a perfect blend of training and socialization! Prepare your puppy for a fun, adventurous life while learning basic training, handling, distraction management, and play skills. For puppies 10-20 weeks with their second set of vaccinations. Start before 16 weeks to graduate at 20 weeks!

Smarty Pups

Smarty Pups offers dogs of all levels a solid foundation of skills through positive, humane training, building a strong, lifelong relationship. Learn attention, recall, handling, polite walking, and self-control. This is level one of our Canine Foundation Classes and is a prerequisite for Polite Pooches.

Polite Pooches

Advance your dog's obedience skills in distracting environments with this course. Using positive reinforcement and practical exercises, we'll enhance your dog's ability to follow commands, stay focused, and behave politely in public. Join us to shape your dog into a well-behaved canine citizen and enjoy a truly polite pooch!

Scent Hounds

Discover your dog's remarkable olfactory abilities in our three-week scent-based enrichment class. Learn scent games like snuffle mats, treat searches, and cup games, offering stimulating mental and physical exercise. Ideal for older, high-arousal, and nervous dogs, this program promotes movement, mental engagement, and confidence-building.

Reactive Rover

The Reactive Rover class is designed for dogs displaying on-leash reactivity like barking, growling, or lunging. Using evidence-based, force-free methods, we keep dogs under threshold in a controlled environment. Techniques learned also help with other triggers like bikes, joggers, and critters. Note: This class does not address human-directed reactivity or aggression.

Fearful Fido

Fearful Fido is for dogs that cower, choose flight, and show signs of fear around people, new environments, and other dogs. Handlers learn to build confidence in shy or fearful dogs using counter-conditioning techniques, associating fearful environments and interactions with positive experiences.

Building Bridges of Compassion Between Seniors and Animals

Our Community Outreach team is passionately dedicated to discovering innovative ways to connect with and engage our community members. This year, we are thrilled to introduce a heartwarming initiative that involves visiting senior homes with our beloved animal ambassadors for enrichment and companionship. These visits hold immense value, creating meaningful interactions that benefit both the seniors and the animals in profound ways.

The joy these encounters bring goes far beyond momentary happiness. For seniors, the presence of our furry friends provides comfort, a renewed sense of purpose, and a cherished social connection that can be deeply enriching. The unconditional love and companionship that are offered by our animal ambassadors can transform ordinary days into extraordinary moments of joy and affection.

Moreover, bringing shelter animals into the community fosters increased involvement and support for animal welfare causes. It serves as a powerful reminder of the importance of these wonderful creatures in our lives and encourages the adoption of shelter animals. These interactions also provide invaluable socialization opportunities for the animals, helping them become more comfortable and adaptable, ultimately increasing their chances of finding forever homes.

Through this initiative, we aim to create lasting bonds between our community members and our animal friends, promoting a spirit of compassion and understanding that resonates with everyone involved. Together, we can make a meaningful difference in the lives of both people and animals, nurturing a community that thrives on empathy, support, and love.

"Our seniors here at Aspen Heights look forward to these visits every month! They bring joy and happiness, and for those that need it most, help resurface fond memories from their past. Thank you Calgary Humane Society for keeping our residents smiling!"

-Maddi Thauberger, Health & Wellness Director, Aspen Heights Retirement Residence

Pets, People, and Policy: Why We Must Support Renters with Pets

In Canada, pets are more than just animals; they are beloved family members, providing invaluable emotional support and companionship to millions. Over 60% of Canadian households share their homes with cats and dogs, and more than 70% of these households view their pets as family. This deep bond transcends mere ownership, transforming into an essential relationship that enriches lives, supports mental health, and fosters community.

Pets offer proven benefits, such as reducing stress, alleviating depression, combating loneliness, and enhancing social connectedness. These contributions align seamlessly with the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals, underscoring the significant role pets play in promoting overall well-being and resilience.

However, despite these advantages, pet restrictions in rental housing persist, leading to housing insecurity and mental health impacts for many tenants. These restrictions disproportionately affect young people and vulnerable populations, including seniors and individuals with disabilities. The heartbreaking decision to surrender a pet often arises when renters face the impossible choice between suitable housing and keeping their beloved animals. This issue is escalating, driven by national economic challenges that have left many without viable housing options.

One of the top three reasons people surrender their pets to animal shelters is the loss of suitable housing. As economic pressures increase, more families find themselves in this heart-wrenching situation. Discrimination against renters with pets results in more animals being surrendered to shelters, putting additional strain on facilities that are already operating at full capacity. This crisis highlights the urgent need for change.

Landlords, too, stand to benefit from adopting pet-inclusive housing policies. Allowing pets can lead to increased tenant retention and foster a stronger sense of community within residential complexes. These benefits, combined with the improved well-being of tenants, make a compelling case for embracing pet-friendly policies.

The solution is clear: implement nationwide policies that protect renters and their pets. Humane Canada has launched petition e-5046, calling for change to safeguard the bond between people and their pets and ensure housing security for all Canadians. By signing this petition, you can help pave the way for a more inclusive, compassionate society where pets and people thrive together.

Join us in urging policymakers to create a future where no one has to choose between their home and their beloved pet. Sign petition e-5046 today and stand with Humane Canada in promoting a compassionate, equitable, and pet-inclusive future for all Canadians. Your support can make a difference in the lives of countless families across the country. Together, we can ensure that everyone has the opportunity to experience the joy and comfort of living with pets.
